white

Montlouis-sur-Loire, François Chidaine 'Clos de Breuil', 2017, Loire Valley 90

Francoise Chidaine is a truly singular winemaker. His wines have been instrumental in putting this tiny Loire River appellation on the map and he is arguably one of the true trailblazers of biodynamic viticulture in all of France.

But for me, he is most remarkable because he is one of a handful of winegrowers committed to Regenerative Farming practices throughout his vineyards, which is a practice that could have a profoundly positive impact on the Earth's climate change and the bio-diversity of her soils.

I don't know if that is what makes Chidaine's wines some of the most expressive, complex and electrifying Chenin Blanc around, but it sure makes you feel great drinking it.

Valdigué, Cruse Wine Co., 2017, Napa Valley, California 90

The Valdigué grape is a fascinating part of Napa's history. For most of the twentieth century it was known as "Napa Gamay," as it was incorrectly thought to be identical to Beaujolais' prized grape. But the grape fell out of fashion during the state's "Cab Craze" and has been mostly ripped out. In fact, 950 acres stood in Napa County in 1973, and as of 2015 just 21 remain.

There are just a handful of producers making wine from this rare and charming grape and none more successfully than Michael Cruse. He is one of Cali's most exciting young winemakers...talented, original and very influential to a new generation of winemakers and wine drinkers.

His valdiguie just happens to be my perfect warm weather red. It's spicy, with berries and rose petals all swirling around and just enough tannin to let you know it means business.
