Ryme Ribolla Gialla 'Vare Vineyard', 2013, Napa Valley, California 125

This husband and wife team, Ryan and Megan Glaab, has always impressed me. Their contrasting styles as wine makers tend to create very dynamic and highly expressive wines. This "orange wine" was kept on its grape skins for an extended period giving it serious structure and almost sherry-like hints of oxidation. This is a white wine with a red wine attitude.

Domaine Trapet Passetoutgrains 'A Minima', 2016, Burgundy 72

Pinot Noir and Gamay together? Go on..., I'm intrigued. There is only one appellation in all of France that allows this unusual blend and when done right, it can be an absolute delight. The delicate sophistication of Pinot with the fruity funk of Gamay from one of Burgundy's greatest Biodynamic producers make this wine greater than the sum of its parts.

Gamay, Arnot-Roberts, 2017, El Dorado, California 85

If the new movement of wine making in California were to throw a parade, Duncan Arnot Meyers and Nathan Lee Roberts would be the proud grand marshals. Not only do their wines reflect a balanced style that beautifully walks the line between the old world and the new, but they also express a variety of California terroirs that borders on encyclopedic. The cornerstone of their approach starts with a dedication to finding uber-distinctive vineyards spanning most of California. So whether you're drinking their Sonoma Cabernet or Sierra Foothills Gamay, you will experience a snapshot of California that only a handful of other winemakers have managed to capture. They are not breaking the rules, they are making the rules.
